What Are Hearing Aid Levels and Why Are They Important?

When shopping for a hearing aid, how do you get the sound quality that will work best for you? The way to determine hearing aid sound quality is to understand hearing aid levels: Standard, Advanced, and Premium.

As you move up levels, from Standard to Premium, the sound quality improves, becoming closer to natural hearing. Imagine the difference between a hand-held radio and a high-end stereo. Although you can hear and listen to the same song through both, a stereo system will give you higher fidelity, more nuance, and a better overall listening experience than a hand-held radio.

Every person has a unique hearing profile. You may need a high-end stereo, a hand-held radio, or maybe something in between. Your provider will work with you to determine an individualized hearing aid solution to fit your needs and lifestyle.
